$2.50 MILK PRICE SET FOR JANUARY

Agreement Reached After Three Separate Meetings at the LaSalle Hotel

DEALERS OFFER $2.35

After meeting with the milk board of the Milk Producers in three separate sessions in which the milk board first asked for $3.00 milk, later modifying this to $2.80, the buyers refused to concede this price, offering $2.35.

There seemed to be a determination on the part of both sides to hold out and for a while it looked as if there was going to be trouble between the producers and buyers. Through the shrewdness of one or two on the milk board this was averted and the meeting broke up with the dealers considering the $2.50 price and the milk board in accord, but the price not to be posted.

Sunday the board was notified that buyers would concede to the price of $2.50, the board going into session with them Tuesday to confirm the price.

This is a price that is justifiable at the present time, not from the farmers' side but from the buyers, that if the price of milk to the consumer retained.

Considering this is the poor season for the year for the farmer, this increase bespeaks good times ahead, if the farmers will use common sense and not flood the market with milk.

most effective beginning of the year. Then the final prayers and the Recessional Hymn. Mr. McTaggart played the service and his excellent service greatly appreciated.

Sunday the services are as Church School and Instruction and Morning Prayer and Service. The Prayers of the station are asked for the sick parish. Every member and student of St. Ignace Church start the New Year right by a prayer to miss Divine Service during the year. It is not only a great privilege, but when they said unto me: go into the house of the

MAKE BUSINESS OF PLEASURE

Americans in London Criticized Because They Do Their Sightseeing in Methodical Manner.

There is something like an American invasion of London at the present time. The transatlantic visitors, according to the Edinburgh Scotsman are easily identified even when they move along silently and their unmistakable accents is unheard. Adorned with large horn-rimmed glasses and wearing clothes of distinctive cut, they do their sightseeing methodically. With guide books in hand, they visit all the public institutions, buildings and historic places to which they are taken.

They cross Fox, State Line, and into the city at the home of F. W. Stence of court and Mrs. Olen Monroe (parliamentary) returned to their home from the after spending the holiday with Mrs. Monroes parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Pike.

Mrs. Van Patten, Antioch, is employed as nurse at the J. W. Shottliff home.

Mrs. Joe Dixon attended the wedding of her granddaughter, Bernice Steinback, last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bryant, Kenosha, called on Bristol friends one day last week.

Mrs. Gene Thorne entertained at New Year's dinner Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Gaines entertained at six o'clock dinner Saturday.

Miss Carrie Murdock, Union Grove, spent last week with friends and relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bennett are 71.

FORMER LOCAL MAN WINS IN DISPLAY CONTEST

The following article was taken from the Delavan, Wis., paper where Mr. Wm. Dupre conducts a store:

One of the happiest men in the city over the Christmas holiday was William S. Dupre. Incidentally, every member of the organization felt the same thrill. Mr. Dupre was awarded $250 by the Remington Arms company for his window display of that company's merchandise a few weeks ago in competition with hardware dealer all over the country, including those of Chicago, Milwaukee and New York. For a dealer in a city the size of Delavan to win second prize on a window display is regarded as quite out of the ordinary. In keeping with his promise, Mr. Dupre is dividing the prize money with all his employees, as the window, he says, was the result of suggestion and extra work on the part of all his fellow workers.

$400 Fine Is Given Local Drink Parlor

J. Rowling, owner of a soft drink parlor on Main street, was fined $400 in county court by Judge P. L. Persons Saturday, following his plea of guilty for violating the prohibitory act.

Rowling entered a plea of not guilty several days ago in court but today, through his attorney, Eugene Howard, pleaded guilty. He was fined on the count of possession of illicit liquor, the other charges being dropped.

Rowling was raided several weeks ago by Constable Conrad A. Brune, head of the dry agents in the county. The haul was one of the biggest in the year of bonded liquor, according to his report at the time. In the net that sacked the Rowling holdings were 100 quarts of rare gin and 100 pints of supposedly bonded whiskey.

F. WRIGHT PASSES AWAY AT WILMOT

It was claimed a prominent resident of the village of Wilmot Thursday morning at 5:30 when Edwin Eugene Wright, aged 65 years, long owner of a furniture and undertaking business here died at his home following a short illness from pneumonia. Mr. Wright was taken ill on Saturday morning, Dec. 23, due to overwork, caused by the holiday business at his store. His condition was such that he was unable to withstand the first attack of the disease. At the bedside when the final summons came were his wife, Mrs. Mary L. Wright and his son, Clarence Wright, of Burlington, a daughter, Mrs. Fuzon, of New York city, had been summoned to her father's bedside but was unable to reach the home before death came.

The death has saddened the entire community in which Mr. Wright lived as he had scores of friends throughout the village and surrounding community.

The deceased was born in Randall township, Kenosha county, Feb. 6, 1857, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, pioneer settlers of that part of the county. He was reared on his father's farm, attended the district schools and later the schools at Richmond and taught school for several years. He conducted a meat market at Wilmot and later a harness shop. A few years later he purchased the furniture and undertaking business of Louis Scherf, which he has operated since that time.

The funeral services were held at the home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the Wilmot lodge of Masons in charge.

OTTO KLAS TO CONDUCT GREAT UNLOADING SALE

The entire stock of Otto S. Klass will be placed on sale starting Saturday morning, January 6. Every article in the store is priced for a quick selling, and from the efforts being made by Mr. Klass it looks as if this will be one of the greatest sales ever held in Antioch.

WHAT NEXT?

The Soo line got all "balled up" on Tuesday morning. The 7 o'clock milk train arrived at 6:40 and the 6:40 nearly on time, arriving at 7:00. Just so some train arrives at the time designated on the time table it doesn't matter which one it is. What next?

Grade School Happenings

IRMA HANK, Editor

Everyone enjoyed his vacation and is glad to get back to school.

John Woodhead spent part of his vacation in Chicago.

Miss Andrews has resigned her position and Miss McLin has taken her place.

Carl Katlor of Madison, Wis., was a guest of the Barthel twins.

Miss Dunham has surprised us all by coming back to school as Mrs. Charles Lux.

Harold Hoffman enjoyed a trip to Chicago during the holidays.

Elsie Roeschlein spent the Christmas holidays in Chicago.

Francis Brodie spent part of the Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Brodie.

Ida Story spent part of her vacation in Fontana, Wis.

Elsie Roeschlein entertained her sister Louise Christmas day.

Lucille and Elmer Webb of Chicago spent Christmas with Hazel Webb.

Millon Mumford had company from Evanston.

Richard Folbrink entertained friends from Richmond, Ill.

Arthur and Mary Anderson entertained relatives from Racine, Wis., New Year's day.

The school collected nearly $50 for the Armenian relief. Betty Warriner gave a $10 bill.

Xavier Hawkins is on the sick list. Homer LaPlant entertained his sister, Mildred, from Chicago over the holidays.

We were sorry to lose Opal and Nella Cooper. The family has moved to Millburn.

The four lower grades had a combined Christmas tree and program in Mrs. Lux's room the Friday before vacation. Every child received some present and a treat of either ice cream or candy.

The first grade pupils are studying about Eskimos.

The various rooms look quite bare after the Christmas decorations have been taken away.

Adele Bentner spent part of the Christmas holidays in Chicago.

Mae Brodie spent her vacation in Chicago.

Bernice Folbrink and Genevieve Sanborn were visitors at the grade school Tuesday.

ARREST MANY FOR GOING ON NEW ROAD

Newly Laid Concrete Road At Loon Lake Is Called "Trap"

FINED IN WAUKEGAN

A number of motorists from Antioch and surrounding towns were arrested the past few weeks on what they termed as a "road trap." The arrests were made on the new concrete road recently completed on the west side of Loon Lake, on Antioch road. Several of those placed under arrest informed the News office they had been allowed to travel over the road for a period of about two weeks, their being but a flimsy barricade to give warning of the new road, which was covered with snow. After the traffic had become quite heavy, Constable Fisher of Lake Villa was placed on the inside of the barricade with orders to arrest all that trespassed. Arrests became so frequent that Stanley Thompson of Antioch was sent to give assistance.

Those arrested were taken to Waukegan, where Justice Mason placed the fines, some receiving fines of $24.25, while others drew $11.25 fines.

Those that registered the "kicks" did not blame the officials for arresting them for driving over the newly laid road, but for allowing traffic over the thoughtless and then placing the constables within the "dead line" instead of warning them at the "flimsy" barricades.

After arresting a great number of motorists the contractor was ordered to barricade the road in a better manner.

ELECTRIC LINE BUYS SITE FOR NEW TERMINAL

The most sensational realty deal which involves the construction of a huge railroad depot and terminal in the downtown section of Waukegan, was closed Saturday when the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee electric railroad purchased from Frank Dady the Arlington hotel block, and 44 feet of frontage on County street from M. B. Salmon.

The property purchased from Mr. Dady runs from County street through to Utica, besides the hotel it includes some vacant lots both to the south and north of the hotel, and a two-story building on Utica, as well as several big barns in the rear of the hotel, one of which is being razed to make room for the terminal.

WILMOT WOMAN PASSES AWAY

Mrs. William Frank Albrecht, aged 71 years, long a resident of the village of Wilmot, died at her home there after a long illness from asthma and pleurisy. She had been critically ill for several days and death was not unexpected.

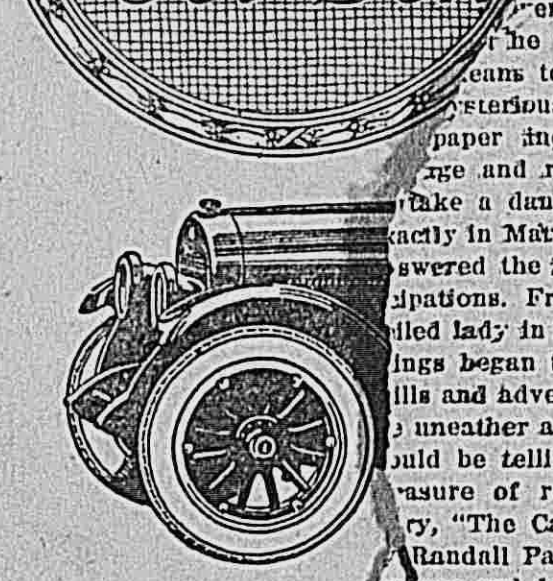

The deceased had taken an active part in the life of the community for many years and her death comes as a severe loss to the village. She is survived by her husband, Frank Albrecht, two sons, Frank and Fred Albrecht, and three daughters, Mrs. John Hasselman, Mrs. Matt Hahn and Mrs. Chris Eller, all of Kenosha or Kenosha county.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock at the Evangelical Lutheran church at Wilmot, the Reverend Mr. Jedele, pastor of the church officiating.

MRS. G. W. HALL SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lima, Ohio. — "Indeed, your medicine is all you say it is. I had very severe troubles such as women often have, and could do no heavy work. I was sick for several years, and from reading your ads. I finally decided to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now doing my own washing, which I haven't done for several years, and can walk long distances without those dragging pains and weak feelings. The Vegetable Compound is fine, and I never forget to say a good word for it to other women when they say they need something." — Mrs. G. W. HALL, 539 Hazel Avenue, Lima, Ohio.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. The trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Hall's experience is but one of many.

Erskine Dale — Pioneer

By John Fox, Jr.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued.

Grey was cautious at first, trying out his opponent's increase in skill. "You have made marked improvement." "Thank you," smiled Erskine. "Your wrist is much stronger." "Naturally," Grey leaped backward and parried just in time a vicious thrust that was like a dart of lightning.

"Ah! A Frenchman taught you that." "A Frenchman taught me all the little I know." "I wonder if he taught you how to meet this."

"He did," answered Erskine, parrying easily and with an answering thrust that turned Grey suddenly anxious. Constantly Grey maneuvered to keep his back to the moon, and just as constantly Erskine easily kept him where the light shone fairly on both. Grey began to breathe heavily. "I think, too," said Erskine, "that my wind is a little better than yours—would you like a short resting spell?"

From the shadow Ephraim chuckled, and Grey snapped: "Make that black devil!" "Keep quiet, Ephraim!" broke in Erskine sternly. Again Grey maneuvered for the moon, to no avail, and Erskine gave warning: "Try that again and I will put that moon in your eyes and keep it there." Grey was getting angry now and was beginning to pant.

"Your wind is short," said Erskine with mock compassion. "I will give you a little breathing-spell presently." Grey was not wasting his precious breath now and he made no answer. "Now!" said Erskine sharply, and Grey's blade flew from his hand and lay like a streak of silver on the dewy grass. Grey rushed for it.

"D—n you!" he raged, and wheeled furiously—patience, humor, and caution quite gone—and they fought now in deadly silence. Ephraim saw the British officer appear in the hall and walk unsteadily down the steps as though he were coming down the path, but he dared not open his lips. There was the sound of voices, and it was evident that the game had ended in a quarrel and the players were coming up the river bank toward them. Erskine heard, but if Grey did he at first gave no sign—he was too much concerned with the death that faced him. Suddenly Erskine knew that Grey had heard, for the fear in his face gave way to a diabolic grin of triumph and he lashed suddenly into defense—if he could protect himself only a little longer! Erskine had delayed the finishing stroke too long and he must make it now. Grey gave way step by step—parrying only. The blades flashed like tiny bits of lightning. Erskine's face, grim and inexorable, brought the sick fear back into Grey's, and Erskine saw his enemy's lips open. He lunged then, his blade went true, sank to the hilt, and Grey's warped soul started on its way with a craven cry for help. Erskine sprang back into the shadows and snatched his pistol from Ephraim's hand.

"Get out of the way now. Tell them I did it."

Once he looked back. He saw Barbara at the hall door with old mammy behind her. With a running leap he vaulted the hedge, and, hidden in the bushes, Ephraim heard Firefly's hoofs beating ever more faintly the sandy road.

CHAPTER XVIII

Yorktown broke the British heart, and General Dale, still weak from wounds, went home to Red Oaks. It was not long before, with gentle inquiry, he had pieced out the full story of Barbara and Erskine and Dana Grey, and wisely he waited his chance with each phase of the situation. Frankly he told her first of Grey's dark treachery, and the girl listened with horrified silence, for she would as soon have trusted that beloved father as the heavenly Father in her prayers. She left him when he finished the story and he let her go without another word. All day she was in her room and at sunset she gave him her answer, for she came to him dressed in white, knelt by his chair, and put her head in his lap. And there was a rose in her hair.

"I have never understood about myself and—that man," she said, "and I never will."

"I do," said the general gently, "and I understand you through my sister who was so like you. Erskine's father was as indignant as Harry is now, and I am trying to act toward you as my father did toward her." The girl pressed her lips to one of his hands.

"I think I'd better tell you the whole story now," said General Dale, and he told of Erskine's father, his wilderness and his wanderings, his marriage, and the capture of his wife and the little son by the Indians, all of which she knew, and the girl wondered why he should be telling her again. The general paused.

"You know Erskine's mother was not killed. He found her." The girl looked up amazed and incredulous.

"Yes," he went on, "the white woman whom he found in the Indian village was his mother."

"Father!" She lifted her head quickly, leaned back with hands caught tight in front of her, looked up into his face—her own crimsoning and paling as she took in the full meaning of it all. Her eyes dropped. "Then," she said slowly, "that Indian girl—Early Morn—is his half-sister. Oh, oh!" A great pity flooded her heart and eyes. "Why didn't Erskine take them away from the Indians?"

"His mother wouldn't leave them." And Barbara understood.

"Poor Erskine!" she whispered, and her tears came. Her father leaned back and for a moment closed his eyes.

"There is more," he said finally. "Erskine's father was the eldest brother—and Red Oaks—"

The girl sprang to her feet, startled, agonized, shamed: "Belongs to Erskine," she finished with her face in her hands. "God pity me," she whispered, "I drove him from his own home."

"No," said the old general with a gentle smile. He was driving the barb deep, but sooner or later it had to be done.

"Look here!" He pulled an old piece of paper from his pocket and handed it to her. Her wide eyes fell upon a rude boyish scrawl and a rude drawing of a buffalo pierced by an arrow.

"It make me laugh. I have no use. I give hole dam plantashun Barbara."

"Oh!" gasped the girl and then—"where is he?"

"Waiting at Williamsburg to get his discharge." She rushed swiftly down the steps, calling:

"Ephraim! Ephraim!"

And ten minutes later the happy, grinning Ephraim, mounted on the thoroughbred, was speeding ahead of a whirlwind of dust with a little scented note in his battered slouch hat.

"You said you would come whenever I wanted you. I want you to come now."

BARBARA.

The girl would not go to bed, and the old general from his window saw her like some white spirit of the night motionless on the porch. And there through the long hours she sat. Once she rose and started down the great path toward the sundial, moving slowly through the flowers and moonlight until she was opposite a giant magnolia. Where the shadow of it touched the light on the grass, she had last seen Grey's white face and scarlet breast. With a shudder she turned back. The night whitened. A catbird started the morning chorus. The dawn came and with it Ephraim. The girl waited where she was. Ephraim too, off his battered hat.

"Marce Erskine done gone, Miss Barbary," he said brokenly. "He done gone two days."

The girl said nothing, and there the old general found her still motionless—the torn bits of Erskine's scrawling deed scattered about her feet.

CHAPTER XIX

On the summit of Cumberland gap Erskine Dale faced Firefly to the east and looked Jals last on the forests that swept unbroken back to the river James. It was all over for him back there and he turned to the wilder depths, those endless leagues of shadowy woodlands, that he would never leave again.

At Boonesborough he learned from the old ferryman that, while the war might be coming to an end in Virginia, it was raging worse than ever in Kentucky. There had been bloody Indian forays, bloody white reprisals, fierce private wars, and even then the whole border was in a flame. Forts had been pushed westward even beyond Lexington, and 1782 had been Kentucky's year of blood. Erskine pushed on, and ever grew his hopelessness. The British had drawn all the savages of the Northwest into the war. As soon as the snow was off the ground the forays had begun. Horses were stolen, cabins burned, and women and children were carried off captive. The pioneers had been confined to their stockaded forts, and only small bands of riflemen sallied out to patrol the country. Old Jerome Sanders' fort was deserted. Old Jerome had been killed. Twenty-three widows were at Harrodsburg filing the claims of dead husbands, and among them were Polly Conrad and Honor Sanders. The people were expecting an attack in great force from the Indians led by the British. At the Blue Licks there had been a successful ambush by the Indians and the whites had lost half their number, among them many brave men and natural leaders of the settlements. Captain Clark was at the mouth of Licking river and about to set out on an expedition and needed men.

Erskine, sure of a welcome, joined him and again rode forth with Clark through the northern wilderness, and this time a thousand mounted riflemen followed them. Clark had been stirred at last from his lethargy by the tragedy of the Blue Licks and this expedition was one of reprisal and revenge; and it was to be the last. The time was autumn and the corn was ripe. The triumphant savages rested in their villages unsuspecting and unafraid, and Clark fell upon them like a whirlwind. Taken by surprise, and startled and dismayed by such evidence of the quick rebirth of power in the beaten whites, the Indians of every village fled at their approach, and Clark put the torch not only to cabin and wigwam but to the fields of standing corn. As winter was coming on, this would be a sad blow, as Clark intended, to the savages.

Erskine had told the big chief of his mother, and every man knew the story and was on guard that she should come to harm. A captured Shawnee told that the Shawnees had got word that the whites were coming, and their women and old men had fled or were fleeing, all, except in a village he had just left—he paused and pointed toward the east where a few wisps of smoke were rising. Erskine turned: "Do you know Kahtoo?"

"He is in that village." Erskine hesitated: "And the white woman—Gray Dove?"

"She, too, is there." "And Early Morn?"

"Yes," grunted the savage. "What does he say?" asked Clark. "There is a white woman and her daughter in a village, there," said Erskine, pointing in the direction of the smoke.

Clark's voice was announcing the fact to his men. Hastily he selected twenty. "See that no harm comes to them," he cried, and dashed forward. Erskine in advance saw Black Wolf and a few bucks covering the retreat of some fleeing women. They made a feeble resistance of a volley and they too turned to flee. A white woman emerged from a tent and with great dignity stood, peering with dim eyes. To Clark's amazement Erskine rushed forward and took her in his arms. A moment later Erskine cried:

"My sister, where is she?" The white woman's trembling lips opened, but before she could answer, a harsh, angry voice broke in haughtily, and Erskine turned to see Black Wolf stalking in, a prisoner between two stalwart woodsmen.

"Early Morn is Black Wolf's squaw. She is gone—!" He waved one hand toward the forest.

The insolence of the savage angered Clark, and not understanding what he said, he asked angrily:

"Who is this fellow?" "He is the husband of my half-sister," answered Erskine gravely.

Clark looked dazed and uncomprehending:

"And that woman?"

"My mother," said Erskine gently. "Good God!" breathed Clark. He turned quickly and waved the open-mouthed woodsmen away, and Erskine and his mother were left alone. A feeble voice called from a tent near by.

"Old Kahtoo!" said Erskine's mother. "He is dying and he talks of nothing but you—go to him!" And Erskine went. The old man lay trembling with palsy on a buffalo-rope, but the incredible spirit in his wasted body was still burning in his eyes.

"My son," said he, "I knew your voice. I said I should not die until I had seen you again. It is well . . . it is well," he repeated, and wearily his eyes closed. And thus Erskine knew it would be.

CHAPTER XX

That winter Erskine made his clearing on the land that Dave Yandell had picked out for him, and in the center of it threw up a rude log hut in which to house his mother, for his remembrance of her made him believe that she would prefer to live alone. He told his plans to none.

In the early spring, when he brought his mother home, she said that Black Wolf had escaped and gone farther into the wilderness—that Early Morn had gone with him. His mother seemed ill and unhappy. Erskine, not knowing that Barbara was on her way to find him, started on a hunting-trip. In a few days Barbara arrived and found his mother unable to leave her bed, and Lydia Noe sitting beside her. Harry had just been there to say good-bye before going to Virginia.

Barbara was dismayed by Erskine's absence and his mother's look of suffering and extreme weakness, and the touch of her cold fingers. There was no way of reaching her son, she said—he did not know of her illness. Barbara told her of Erskine's giving her his inheritance, and that she had come to return it. Meanwhile Erskine, haunted by his mother's sad face, had turned homeward. To his bewilderment, he found Barbara at his mother's bedside. A glance at their faces told him that death was near. His mother held out her hand to him while still holding Barbara's. As in a dream, he bent over to kiss her, and with a last effort she joined their hands, clasping both. A great peace transformed her face as she slowly looked at Barbara and then up at Erskine. With a sigh her head sank lower, and her lovely dimming eyes passed into the final dark.

Two days later they were married. The woodsmen, old friends of Erskine's, were awed by Barbara's daintiness, and there were none of the rude jests they usually flung back and forth. With hearty handshakes they said good-bye and disappeared into the mighty forest. In the silence that fell, Erskine spoke of the life before them, of its hardships and dangers, and then of the safety and comfort of Virginia. Barbara smiled:

"You choose the wilderness, and your choice is mine. We will leave the same choice . . ." She flushed suddenly and bent her head.

"To those who come after us," flashed Erskine.

[THE END.]

Greatly Interested. "The milkmaids of Jamaica are one of the wonders of the island," reported a prominent Bradford (Pa.) business man, after a stay in Montego Bay, Jamaica, B. W. I. "They can carry large cans of milk from mountain ranges to markets on their heads, and never even move the cans as they sell and pour out the milk. They go upstairs and down, and are so adept that when they start up a flight they can begin to fill their pitchers, measuring the amount by the number of steps taken. I watched them many times with great interest and delight."

MOVE TO ADMIT ALIEN TOILERS

Farmers and Manufacturers Desire Lid Raised on European Immigration.

SHORTAGE OF COMMON LABOR

House Committee at Washington to Give Hearing to Representatives of the National Manufacturers' Association.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The big industries of the country and farm organizations have joined in a determined drive to procure such relaxation of the immigration restriction law as will relieve the present shortage of common labor.

With the backing of the senators and representatives of the leading industrial and agricultural states a concerted effort will be made to obtain legislation at this session of congress which will operate to admit probably not less than 100,000 aliens in excess of the number of immigrants coming in under the 3 per cent quota law.

The house committee on immigration will give a hearing to a committee of the National Manufacturers' association, which will propose three major modifications of the present restriction law. The plan was worked out in consultation with agricultural leaders and its essential features were approved at the recent meeting of the American Farm Bureau federation in Chicago.

The recommendations of the manufacturers' committee follow:

"1. That in fixing the quota of each nationality of otherwise admissible aliens under the present law, due regard should be given to the ascertained annual emigration from the United States of persons of such nationality.

"2. That the secretary of labor shall be authorized, upon the presentation to him of satisfactory evidence of a continuing shortage of labor of a particular class or type, to admit otherwise admissible aliens in excess of the quota until in his judgment such condition is improved.

"3. That provision shall be made for physical examination of aliens at ports of entry, and that their passports are required to show satisfactory evidence of such examination."

"I enjoyed Christmas this time with more pleasure than I had in years," remarked W. L. Mahone, 410, Charlottesville, Va., the other day, in telling of the benefits he has derived from the use of Tanlac. Mr. Mahone has been a railroad conductor for nineteen years. He runs on the Chesapeake & Ohio from Charlottesville to Washington, D. C., and Richmond, Va.

"My stomach and digestion had been bad so long that I can hardly remember the time I could eat without suffering afterwards. I gradually grew weaker until I was often having to lay off from my run. In this run-down condition I contracted pneumonia in both lungs and came near losing my life.

"After this spell my stomach troubled me worse than ever and I remained almost as weak and helpless as a baby. While sitting around reading the papers I was attracted by the statements about Tanlac, which had such a sincere ring that I was led to believe the medicine might help me up the hill, and it pulled me clean up to the top. My appetite never fails, stomach misery is all gone, and I have gained thirty-five pounds in weight. Tanlac keeps me feeling 'spick and span,' too, so I can make my runs and still feel fine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

St. Ignatius' Church News

REGULAR SERVICES

Holy Communion. 8:00 a.m.
(Except 3d Sunday)
Church School. 9:45 a.m.
Morning Prayer. 11:00 a.m.
Holy Eucharist. 11:00 a.m.
(Third Sunday of Month)

Last Sunday, the Sunday after Christmas, and the day before New Year's Day, was observed at St. Ignatius' Church as usual. In the morning at 9:45 the Church School met and a resolution was made by all the members of the Church School to be present every Sunday during the coming year.

At Morning Prayer Mr. McTaggart played the music which was heartily entered into. The sermon concerned the Incarnation, the great central fact that is brought out by the season of Christmas. The Incarnation was the beginning of the whole system of Christianity, and without it the rest would be impossible. The person of Our Lord was sacramental, because it was the outward and visible sign of the inward and spiritual Godhead. The Church is sacramental, because it is the outward and visible sign of the Body of Christ. Everything is sacramental, even the commonest things in life. A tear is sacramental, because it is an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual emotion. The Church with its systems of sacraments is the extension of the Incarnation, and the means by which we are partakers of the benefits of Our Lord's coming to earth. And so, the Incarnation, the central doctrine of the Christian Church, is most intimately connected with you and me, as we live the sacramental life that the Church expects us to live.

Starting at 10:30 in the evening there was a New Year's Eve Service consisting of Evening Prayer, Sermon on St. Stephen, and Sacred Concert by the Harmonium Quartette. Familiar hymns were sung and the sacred concert was well rendered by the quartette, to whom we desire to express our appreciation for their faithful and splendid work. As the hour drew near to 12 the quartette sang "The Radiant Morn," which was most appropriate for the occasion. At 3 minutes before 12 the congregation was asked to engage in silent prayer, and at 12:12, going at the after-sound, and then the bell in the tower. It was a most effective beginning of the New Year. Then the final prayers were said and the Recessional Hymn was sung. Mr. McTaggart played the entire service and his excellent services are greatly appreciated.

Next Sunday the services are as usual, Church School and Instruction at 9:45, and Morning Prayer and Sermon at 11:00. The Prayers of the Congregation are asked for the sick of the parish. Every member and communicant of St. Ignatius' Church should start the New Year right by a resolution not to miss Divine Service any Sunday during the year. It is not only a duty but it is a great privilege. "I was glad when they said unto me: We will go into the house of the Lord."

Methodist Episcopal Church News

The Revival meeting starts out with good prospects. The three services Sunday were full of religious inspiration, and the sermons and addresses of Dr. Ludgate are packed full of definite Bible truth.

The evidence of interest among the people is increasing day by day. The music is highly attractive. Ludgate's silver-rod concertina, made on special order in London, is a splendid adjunct and the Doctor certainly knows how to make it talk.

Already there are unmistakable signs of deepened religious life in many of the Christian people, and some who have not publicly stood for Christ are showing very marked interest.

One of the most inspiring things about having a man of the type of Dr. Ludgate come into a community for three weeks and speak God's message is that he brings tidings of what is going on in other fields—how the gospel takes hold, how men and women come weeping to the foot of the cross and find the great glad joy of forgiveness for all the past and great new strength of spirit to live the good life hereafter. It shows us again, all afresh, that God can awaken any people, any community, and make the fountains of deep feeling flow, even where they have been frozen up for many years.

Many are praying and trusting that that is what is coming to pass in Antioch community within a few days. Let us all be praying very earnestly for it.

Let every Christian do his best to be present every meeting and to get others to come. Those afternoon meetings are so exceedingly rich in the highest possible religious values that no one can afford to miss a single one of them. Afternoon, 2:00; evening, 7:00.

Historic Cabin Shown in "Tol'able David" At Crystal Saturday

When "Tol'able David," which Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is releasing as Richard Barthelmess' first starring vehicle, appears on the screen, northerners for the first time will see one of the most famous historic spots of the Civil War. It is Mosby's cabin in which the famous Confederate guerrilla leader took refuge after the battle of Winchester. The story is picturesquely told in the famous poem of "Sheridan Twenty Miles Away."

Tradition in the Virginia mountains to this day insists that any man desiring to escape cannot be captured in this territory.

Union soldiers, hot on the trail of Mosby, came to the cabin where he had paused for a bite to eat. Without hesitation he climbed into the chimney. Searching the place they failed to find him, as the hot chimney seemed inaccessible to them as a hiding place.

Daniel Boone, the famous pioneer of Kentucky, is also credited with having stopped at the cabin, "D. Boone" being carved in aged, worn letters on a log. This cabin is one hundred and fifty years old.

Marion Davies in "The Young Diana" At Majestic Theater

One of the most daring and adventurous feats that Marion Davies has ever performed for the screen will be seen in her latest picture, "The Young Diana," a Marie Corelli story. Miss Davies lies suspended twenty feet in the air on a frail glass platform vibrating over a large revolving sphere of brilliant light. The situation is one of the most thrilling ever screened. This scene is in a weird laboratory where Miss Davies, in her character of Diana May, submits herself to a hazardous experiment for the restoration of lost youth and beauty. Diana May has become prematurely aged and faded. She hears of a Dr. Feoder Dimitrius who seeks a brave woman to undergo a process that will either make her dazzling beautiful or result in her death. Dr. Dimitrius' delving into abstruse sciences and his uncanny doings in his laboratory have made him feared by the natives in the little Swiss community in which he lives.

From a trap door, when it is time for the momentous experiment, there slowly blides the lighted sphere. Diana, on her glass platform, is lowered into the trap. A few minutes later she is raised, lifted from the board and is revealed as a stunning blonde. The transformation is complete.

"The Young Diana," directed by Albert Capellan and Robert G. Vignola, will be shown at the Majestic Theater Saturday next.

The Universal Implement

Forty years ago the telephone was a luxury. Today, it has become a necessity within the reach of everybody. Where once a business house had one telephone with a limited talking range, today that business house has a service with the range of a continent and every branch of every business is linked to every other by an intercommunicating telephone system.

This vast extension of the limits of telephone communication has opened up a wide range of uses for Bell Long Distance service. The Long Distance service is equally useful in making a social engagement in the suburbs or closing an important business deal in New York, Boston or San Francisco.

"Station-to-station" service is a money and time saver. It is explained in the current issue of the Alphabetical Telephone Directory.

Merchants Back Town's Welfare

Cooperation of Business Men Contribute to Up- building of Community

The ambition of every merchant in Antioch is to make this town the best along the line.

This may be a selfish object on his part, but the fact remains that he can prosper only if all the city thrives, for it is obvious that little money will be passed over his counters by people who have no money to spend.

On the other hand, if there is no idleness among the people, if the factories and mills are running at full capacity and all the families in town are living in comfort, with every prospect of good times in the future, their well-being is reflected in the trade that comes to the merchant's store.

No Antioch merchant, however, depends on mere wishing to bring prosperity to his town and to make it grow. He does not doze in his easy chair and dream dreams about outsiders coming in to settle, without helping to create a magnet to attract them. When he argues for better schools and improved streets, it is not in the expectation that his share is to be mere words while other property owners foot the tax bills.

Merchant Backs Town

If that were all there is to it for him, he would not deserve to be a partner in the successful achievements of this community.

Every merchant in this town backs up his confidence in this town, in its prosperity and the prosperity of those in it and in its future as a rising member of this splendid commonwealth, by his hard-earned dollars. Before he can obtain a cent of profit, he must offer a big stock of the goods the public wants, attractively displayed in a conveniently arranged store of adequate size, with all necessary equipment for handling his goods expeditiously, and with well paid, courteous sales people who paramount purpose is to render service to the trade. Not until this investment has been made and this plant is set in all its completeness before the people of the town can he hope to get back even so much as one cent of profit.

It is a big risk to run. If immediate profits were his only object, he never would take this chance. He could invest his money in dozens of other propositions, make more money and make it without waiting so long.

Faith in Town's Future

At the prevailing prices of merchandise in the big city markets, and at the values of property in Antioch today, it is easy to calculate the dollars and cents equivalent of the faith which every business man in town has in the future of Lake Villa. If you look closely, you will find that every one goes the limit of his ability in this direction. This holds for the general store, the lumber dealer, the hardware store, the tinsmith, the furniture man, the notions and specialties store, the jeweler, the shoe store, the harness shop, the garage man and all the rest. Their investment is such that there can be no question of days, weeks or months with them, as to when they can quit with a "pile." There is no get-rich-quick scheme. Once they locate, they become fixtures and nothing short of a considerable term of years suffices to win for them even a fair return for their money. To leave before their business, and the business of the town were squarely on their feet, would be poor business policy; to leave after prosperity had come would be folly.

Does not such a citizen deserve your cooperation?

Spells Real Prosperity

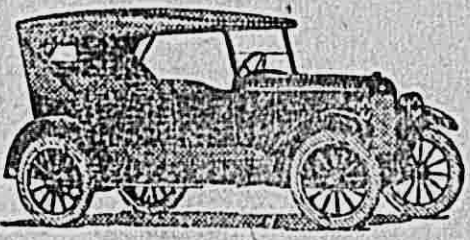

If a new factory has in mind locating in Antioch but is offered a bonus by a neighboring town, the merchant digs down into his pocket and helps raise a larger bonus, bringing a new industry here. Whatever this means to him, it means more work for the people of Antioch. It means more money. It spells prosperity for every family here.

YOUR INVESTMENT

You have made your home in Antioch and are, in sense, an investor in the welfare of the town. The merchants of Antioch have also invested here, to grow and to help the town grow and thrive. They are instrumental in bringing to Antioch new industries that will mean growth and prosperity. So, then, it is a mutual investment between all of us. You can count on the merchants to uphold their end, but they must have your help—your patronage—in order to make our investment pay.

BELIEVE IN OLD PROPHECY

Koreans Flock to Secure Holdings in What They Are Satisfied Is to Be Great City.

Kelyong, the lonely mountain of Korea, experienced a real-estate boom that made the old-town promoter pale into insignificance. On a tiny piece of land on the mountain side were encamped 2,502 persons, forming 518 households, while hundreds more were gathered at the base, bidding high prices for the privilege of buying a bit of land among the favored.

The Korean prophet, Chyong Kam, whose writings have been preserved in the ancestral mausoleum of the one-time Imperial family of Korea, long ago prophesied that Mount Kelyong would be chosen as the religious center of the sect which he founded and as the future capital and metropolis of the peninsula. His prophecy has recently been given great publicity. It is reported, and thousands of Koreans are flocking to the mountain, firm in their belief that it is to be one of the greatest cities of the world and that they are "getting in on the ground floor."

Gentle Passage at Arms. During the war some Australian soldiers were quartered beside the Gordon Highlanders, and took great delight in chaffing the Scotsmen unmercifully.

One of the Gordons, while passing an "Aussie," trod rather heavily on his foot. Up sprang the latter furious, and shouted:

"You stepped on my foot!" "Well," said the Scotsman, "I did my best to jump over it; but a Hellanman's only human, nae a kangaroo!"

Kind Word in Season. An American, newly arrived, went into a London teashop, took his seat and waited. Presently a bright-eyed waitress approached him and asked: "Can I take your order?" "Yes. Two boiled eggs and a kind word."

The waitress brought the eggs and was moving on when the American said: "Say! What about the kind word?" The waitress leaned over and whispered, "Don't eat the eggs."

His Version. Little Frank's parents have been trying to impress on the lad the necessity of saying "If you please" when asking for things he desired. One evening at dinner the following conversation took place:

Frank—Mother, give me some bread.

Mother—Now, Frank! If you—what? Frank—(promptly)—If you can reach it.

The Bonehead! Mrs. Smatter, who loved to air her French, met a male acquaintance just after she had parted with a young woman whom she understood he particularly disliked.

"Oh," she said archly, "did you notice me just now speaking to your bete noire?" "Pardon me," he protested, "you are mistaken there; I never was in love with the lady."—Boston Transcript.

The year 1923 is going to be one of the most historical for the farmers of the dairy district. The first of January ushers in a cooperative marketing company working on a good sound basis, and incidentally a fight to the finish between progressive farm organization and capital.

The quartet has already been thrown down by the dealers in their refusal to accept Marketing Company milk at some of the plants. The Marketing Co. has retaliated by establishing plants of their own.

Richmond, one instance, has succeeded in forcing the local company to recede from a $5,000 price put on the plant to $3500. Woodworth, after the local plant refused to sign up with the Marketing Co. have fixed up an old plant, leaving the local shipper with two unsigned farmers to deal with.

Antioch will no doubt be in the thick of the fight before long and it seems deplorable at this time that so many of the local farmers have not seen their way clear to sign the new Marketing Co. contract. At present over half have signed the contract and with the balance of the outside farmers signing up there would be no difficulty experienced in signing up the local plant. It is understood that Mr. Broxham has not yet fixed his signature to a Marketing Co. contract and probably will necessitate the refusal of the Marketing Co. to allow the milk to go to his plant until he does so.

This fight between the dealers and the farmers is going to make it a little inconvenient for some of the farmers who have signed the Marketing Co. contract, but with the organization now well in operation and the moral support of every right-thinking person for betterment of farm industries, there should be no doubt as to the final happy outcome.

Milk demand is now on the right side of the ledger and it behooves every farmer to do his duty in keeping it so. Any increase in supply at this time will do untold damage, and probably will be the undoing of the present upward movement in process in the dairy interest.—Keep surplus milk off the market!

It probably will be fitting at this time to reflect back over the last two or three years and each farmer to ask himself, "who has been my friend through those trying years," was it the milk order houses or the local merchants? Who gave me credit when I had no money, the milk order houses or the local merchants? Now is the time to show your loyalty.

So let this be a year of strong upward movement of the country business, farmers and merchants alike, you are both in the same boat—one produces and the other builds—and what is your farm worth without a good nearby town, a dependable place to buy, a place where you can get what you want, a place where you can find good amusement. Antioch offers you all these.

The Procrastinator.

Mose and Sam were digging a trench over in France. Although not in an especially safe spot, for a time they were unconscious of their danger. Then a shell flew over their heads and exploded just beyond. Others followed. At the fifth explosion Mose asked inquiringly:

"Sam, don't you all think it's about time we all done got religion?"

"Chuff!" replied Sam scornfully.

"Mose, you suddenly is a tho'ly shiftless boy. Me, I done got religion when de fast bomb bust."—American Legion Weekly.

Little Albert's Hint.

Albert was in the habit of coming over to the ice cream parlor, where I work, every evening, and asking for a cone.

One night when mother brought him home she scolded him for it and forbade him to ask for any more cones.

The next time he came over to the store he said to the proprietor: "I shouldn't ask for anything, but if you want to give me anything be sure it's a cone."—Exchange.

Receipt of Success.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., said in a Y. M. C. A. success talk in New York: "Brilliance without energy is no good. Ability without action is no good."

Mr. Rockefeller thumped the table with his fist.

"It is not enough," he cried, "for a man to know a good thing when he sees it. He must also seize it."

Not Without Reason.

Katherine Louise, age four, came into the house with her little face barely recognizable, so unusually grimy was it. Suspicious-looking black furrows were down her plump cheeks.

"My, but some one I know has an awfully dirty face," remarked her mother.

"Course," came back the matter-of-fact reply. "I been cryin' on it."

DAVID ELFERS BARN BURNS

The fine new $10,000 modern barn on the Davis Elfers farm at Randall caught on fire Sunday noon from defective wiring and burned to the ground in spite of the efficient work of the neighbors and the fire departments from Silver Lake and Wilmot. All the stock was saved but the supply of hay, and feed was a total loss. Mr. Elfers had about 60 ton of hay in the building. A year ago last June Mr. Elfers lost a barn by fire and this structure, modern in all details, had been built to replace it. The building was insured. Mr. Elfers reckons his total loss around $15,000.

A properly grown house plant will have strongly developed roots and the foliage trimmed enough to insure against a premature death of the plant.

Immortal Phrase.

It was John Philpot Curran, noted Irish orator, who said "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

MALE SHOPPERS ARE "WISE"

City Grocery Clerk Denies It Is Easier to Make Sales to Men Than to Women.

"Whoever says that it is easier to sell groceries to men than to women is not acquainted with the facts," said a grocery clerk the other day. "I've seen cartoons in the papers of husbands bringing home cleansing powder instead of rat poison and forgetting half of their wives' orders, but I've never seen it in real life.

"Men are hard customers. I think they read more about the cost of foods, particularly advertising, than women. They seem to know the different brands better, at any rate. I've often substituted brands for a housewife, only to be refused by her husband when I tried it again. I'd rather attempt to talk a woman into buying a new brand of canned peas, for example, than to face her husband with the same sales talk. The male shoppers know too much about food—perhaps because they do most of the eating."—New York Sun.

Possibly Taking No Chances.

Two tired men—the sort of men who are always tired—were talking about the forthcoming election in their town, and discussing the rival candidates.

"Now, that Mr. Pusher is a good sort!" said one.

"I'm not so sure of that," replied the other. "But what makes you think that?"

"Why, did you notice how heartily he shook hands with me?"

"Yes, I did," replied his friend.

"He wasn't content with one hand, he grabbed both. He's a good fellow, he is."

The other looked at him thoughtfully for a moment. Then he said: "Yes, and he's very proud of his gold watch!"

Certain Test.

Two fishermen were angling in a river, when one suddenly dropped his rod.

"Say!" he ejaculated, "Did you see that feller fall off that cliff over there into the river?"

"Don't get excited, Bill," soothed the other, "Mebbe it was a movie actor makin' pictures."

"But, my stars! How kin we tell?"

"Well," counseled the judicious one, "if he drowns, he ain't!"—Epworth Herald.

M. E. CHURCH, ANTIOCH

The Recipe Says

Use just so many cups of flour, but the degree of success of your baking depends on how good your flour is.

ANTIOCH BEST FLOUR, when handled properly, insures baking success.

You cannot measure the quality of flour with a cup, nor can you add to the quality of flour once it is milled.

Quality is determined by the character of the wheat from which the flour is milled, and the skill used in milling it.

ANTIOCH BEST FLOUR will please you once you give it a fair trial, because it is milled from the choicest wheat and with modern equipment by men who are highly skilled in the art of milling.

Treat it as fairly in baking as we have in milling and you will have nothing to regret.

Lake Villa News

Your "Uncle Thomas"

Last week I told you we had a fine new family in Lake Villa very recently and so we have.

Leslie Hutchings is the male side of it. He with Mrs. Hutchings and three children have taken the Eugene A. Wilton farm for a term of years.

I met Leslie at a pure bred Holstein sale at Decatur, Ill., along in March this year. I liked him very much. Learning he might be compelled to move from his Prairie View farm, because of its being too small and not as up-to-date as his plans demanded, I urged him to locate at Lake Villa. I made a wild but true guess that he might get the "Gene" Wilton farm. I tried to help both sides, and the result:

Hutchings in Lake Villa on Wilton's fine farm, recently made very up-to-date with modern fixtures, and "Gene" didn't leave town. He bought Frank Fowler's house on Fox Lake road and before some of the latter's friends (?) (the enemy) had much of a chance to jolly at the going of this "obstreperous cuss," Fowler went next door and bought the Fischer house. So there you are—Hutchings came and with him his wife, two boys and a girl and a fine herd of pure bred Holsteins; Wilton didn't leave town with his fine family and Fowler to the consternation of some and the pleasure of others is still with us.

But speaking of Hutchings' herd of pure bred Holsteins—by the way he's not a "butter-line" buyer—he believes milk—Clean milk from tuberculin tested cows and straight butter is the right kind of feed in that line for his dear little family.

Now for the Holsteins.

He, Hutchings has 23 in his herd, headed by "Epho Pontiac Sylvia," a Canadian bred bull, bought as an 8-month-old calf at the National Holstein sale two years ago. He is bred in lines familiar to all Holstein breeders, his dam being the same sire as "May Echo Sylvia," who holds two world's records. This bull is not old enough to have any daughters in milk—he gets fine type offspring, however, and it is safe to predict his daughters will, when old enough, make a good showing.

Mr. Hutchings at one time owned a cow, "Orange Pauline Champion," who gave 687 lbs milk and 23 lbs butter in 7 days. She milked over 100 lbs. per day for two days. Hutchings is a good judge of dairy animals, a careful kindly indulgent caretaker—a man, if you please, with a dairy temperament.

Drop in and get acquainted with Hutchings—you will like him.

When Mrs. Hutchings gets well again (she has been ill but is now rapidly recovering) ladies of the community better phone her (E. A. Wilton's old phone number) and arrange to go down and call—two or three go down together. Make her feel she has come into a strange community—but one glad to welcome peaceful, law-abiding, regular folks.

I hope no one will be "sore" at my suggesting it, but I've known when you were mighty backward in coming forward to new people of your own kind in this community.

A Lake County Hog

The big prize at the International was to win the $500 for the Grand Champion Fat Steer. From all over the United States came competitors for the "top honor." This year a pure bred shorthorn, "Chenoweth Jack," bred in "old Kentucky," at Shelbyville, by Thomas Bros., grabbed off the "persimmons." The steer, 14 months old, weighed 1010 lbs. That wasn't so damned much. Why a Lake County hog, "Black Giant 2nd," bred, owned and showed by L. J. Metcalf of Gurnee weighed 1010 lbs!

Say Brothers and Sisters, if Metcalf ever brought that black pig into the Arena around which was over 2500 people sitting and some 3000 standing, I can imagine how some of them "city women" would have thought he was a fat rat and I can see them jumping on the railing and seats, raising higher (even) the already short skirts. Some sight, I'll say.

I never could understand why rats and mice sudden appearance made the ladies only feel safe when they raised their skirts—can you see why?

I believe in clean milk—and the best way to clean milk is not to let the dirt get in.

Again the "Butter-line"

Speaking of "butter-line," watch and see how many fellows who sell milk buys back this kind of sawdust—People who eat "butter-line" and think its wholesome and helpful, remind me of the guy who dyes his mustache—he fools no one but himself.

That "dye" stuff reminds me of a story. A symmetrical and of course a very beautiful young woman dressed in the "height" (or was it low—maybe both) of fashion, was passing a barber shop and in the window was a sign (The barber might have been a good barber but he was a rusty speller) The sign: "Whiskers died here." Wondering nonchalantly along, as it were, I'm going to be writing for Snappy Stories the way I'm dropping into this society stuff this sympathetic maid spied the sign—stopped dead still, walked into shop and to the astonished boss, between sobs, (that's a good word) from her girlie, said, "Please, sir, put these flowers on Whiskers' grave."

Next week, well, I may tell you about dances and other forms of amusements where moonshine—hard cider and a lack of common ordinary moral courage brings decent communities and people into undesired disrepute.

On second thought, that's the story itself.

A great many people love dancing more than any other form of amusement. It's a rotten shame when people who love to dance and are restricted in a small community, of necessity, by the lack of amusements to go to dances and find there a lot of cheap drinks—soaks—anything from Sloans liniment to wood alcohol and no one with enough moral courage to either call the village authorities or protect the decent folks by excluding the disgraceful drunks.

THAT'S THAT!

Lake Villa News Briefs

Will Weber transacted business in the city last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hamlin went to Oak Park on Saturday and spent till Monday evening with relatives there.

Mrs. Nettie Smith entertained a friend, Mrs. Stone of Chicago, over New Year.

Lake Villa takes no side seat for the Midnight Watch for the advent of 1923. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louie Faber, who are pronounced excellent entertainers, six couples passed the time with music, singing and refreshments. It was welcomed in with songs and tripping the light fantastic toes. The radio was silenced by the leading the company through the mystic march of the Blackstone and Drake hotels and auditorium, by our master musician. Everything was lovely and the goose was taken care of.

In the wee small hours we bade the
